ORANGE COUNTY
DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

COMMUNITY HEALTH
OUTREACH DIVISION

DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAMS:

Community Health Outreach (CHO) is a county and grant-funded division of the Department of Health. With Orange County's commitment to public health education and New York State Department of Health grants targeting specific public health issues, the division strives to improve the quality of life for County residents through outreach, education, referrals and case management. Services are delivered through offices located in the cities of Newburgh, Middletown and Port Jervis. The overarching goal is to foster behavior changes that will result in positive outcomes through the following programs.

Public Health Education provides prevention and education programs as well as information surrounding a variety of health topics. Public Health Educators work with hospitals, health care providers, school districts, businesses, community agencies, local coalitions and the general public by providing resources and expertise in the health education arena. Public Health Education programs offered include topics on current trends such as general nutrition, exercise education, tobacco prevention and many other wide-ranging wellness programs. Additionally, the Public Health Educators work closely with the local media to disseminate public health messages for the health and safety of the general population.

Healthy Orange was introduced as a means of addressing rising obesity rates. Data from the National Center for Health Statistics shows that 30 percent of U.S. adults 20 years of age and older – over 60 million people – are obese. The percentage of young people who are overweight has more than tripled since 1980.

Healthy Orange addresses three simple but vital issues of improved nutrition, increased physical activity and movement, and a tobacco free lifestyle to improve the overall health of Orange County residents. It also addresses the issues surrounding obesity utilizing best practices relative to age appropriate exercise and the fundamentals of good nutrition. Healthy Orange has become the umbrella for programs addressing the core goals.

- Healthy Orange Seniors
- Healthy Orange Daycares
- Healthy Orange Worksites

Healthy Orange Schools and Communities (HOSC) Program was designed by the Orange County Department of Health and Orange County Department of Planning to implement sustainable policy, system and environmental changes in the targeted high-need school districts of Newburgh Enlarged City School District (NECSD) and Port Jervis City School District (PJCS) and the communities where the students and their families live. NECSD is one of the 15 school districts selected for monitoring by New York State. The project will be funded by the NYS Department of Health. The Orange County Department of Health (OCDOH) will serve as lead in the project, in collaboration with the Orange County Department of Planning (OC Planning), to achieve the overarching goals of increasing access to healthy affordable foods and increasing access to opportunities for physical activities. OCDOH has significant experience working with both school districts in assisting with health and wellness programs in their school buildings. OC Planning has an extensive background in working with key county decision makers, including municipalities throughout the county, to implement policy and system change.

Lead Safe Orange (LSO) is the umbrella name under which CHO coordinates our programs concerning lead poisoning, case management and lead hazards. These programs include Lead Poisoning Prevention, Healthy Neighborhoods, and Childhood Lead Primary Prevention). Through LSO, we have combined the outreach efforts of these programs to focus on lead hazards and exposure throughout Orange County.

The Lead Poisoning Prevention Program (LPPP) serves all areas of Orange County. This program tracks all lead testing activity for children in the county ages 6 months and older. Outreach is done via home visits, agency visits, presentations and health fairs to identify children who need testing and to provide information about health services for children. Case management is provided for lead poisoned children (blood lead levels of ≥ 15 ug/dL) including home visits with the family to teach them about lead hazards, prevention methods, and to ensure medical follow-up for the child. The Environmental Health Division conducts environmental evaluations in the homes of all lead poisoned children. Children with BLL of 10-14 ug/dL receive ongoing monitoring to ensure testing in accordance with NYSDOH guidelines by their medical provider and their families are offered a free lead inspection of their home. In addition, risk reduction education is provided to community groups, schools, health practitioners, landlords and homeowners associations.

The Healthy Neighborhoods Program (HNP) is a primary prevention program providing public health services to targeted geographic areas in Middletown, Newburgh and Port Jervis with a high rate of documented unmet environmental health needs. HNP staff provides education, literature and incentives to residents to assist in identifying lead hazards, methods to control lead hazards, asthma triggers, including exposure to environmental tobacco smoke, and other healthy homes issues.

The Childhood Lead Primary Prevention Program (CLPPP), within the City of Newburgh's Census Tracts 3, 4 and 5, the City of Middletown's Census Tracts 11, 12, 15 and 151 and the City of Port Jervis's Census Tracts 21, 22, and 23, identifies housing at greatest risk of lead-paint hazards and taking action to make them lead safe through lead paint inspection and enforcement. This program offers free training on lead awareness, lead safe work practices and the EPA Renovation, Repair and Painting (RRP) Rule to contractors, property owners, childcare providers, parents, residents, and landlords. The program conducts assessments of housing (HNP) and refers properties to the Public Health Sanitarian for follow up.

Orange County Health Disparities Initiative (OCHDI) addresses health disparities through community engagement and mobilization focused on improving access to care. OCDOH will partner with Community Voices Heard and Catholic Charities to convene listening sessions focused on issues surrounding access to care. The community will be able to openly discuss their experiences, concerns and barriers for a healthier community. The partners will gather information from the Listening Sessions and create an action plan based on the input and needs of the community. OCHDI will form a planning committee consisting of diverse stakeholders and community members. The members will be representative and reflective of the City of Newburgh. The committee will develop and implement a Community Intervention and Sustainability Plan that identifies community identified health priorities.

The Maternal Infant Community Health Collaborative (MICHC) works to improve maternal and infant health outcomes in the cities of Newburgh, Middletown and Port Jervis. This is accomplished by interventions aimed at the individual level through needs assessment, case coordination and referral, and by interventions aimed at the community, environment, and policy levels through community mobilization, promotion of conditions and opportunities that will promote healthy behaviors, and adoption of health promoting policy by organizations, communities, and government. High need women and their infants are eligible to receive home visits, risk assessment, and developmental assessment. Organizations providing services to high need women, and women themselves, are encouraged and supported to become involved in identifying forces in their communities that contribute to behaviors that negatively impact health. Continued community involvement to identify, design, and promote strategies to improve the overall health of women throughout the life course, including pre-conception and inter-conception, is a primary goal of the initiative.

The Adolescent Tobacco Use Prevention Act (ATUPA) is a statewide tobacco enforcement program aimed at reducing the use and accessibility of tobacco to youth under 18 years of age. Youth employees aged 16-17 are trained to conduct compliance checks with adult staff members to ascertain if vendors sell tobacco products to underage youth. Those in violation are provided hearing notices and if found guilty, are fined. Every tobacco vendor in the County receives at least one compliance check yearly. Free vendor education and certification is offered quarterly.

The Migrant Health Services (MHS) provides outreach and education services to migrant farm workers in Orange County to reduce the risk of contracting communicable and infectious diseases and improve occupational health and safety. This is a collaborative service between the Orange County Department of Health, the Hudson Valley Migrant Health Program of Hudson River HealthCare, Inc., based in Goshen, and other agencies that serve our migrant farm working population. The primary focus areas of the program are TB, HIV, STDs and injury prevention.
